Sam Dyer, a Beekmantown vegetable and dairy farmer, as well as Clinton County Legislature chairman, reads “Who Grew My Soup?” to a third-grade class at Beekmantown Elementary School on Wednesday. The activity was part of Agricultural Literacy Week, a program of New York Agriculture in the Classroom aimed to educate children about the food system and celebrate agriculture. This year, volunteers will read the book, written by Tom Darbyshire and illustrated by C.F. Payne, to more than 50,000 students in 56 New York state counties.
