Program for Andrew D. White Professors-at-Large (PAL)
Annual Report to the Faculty Senate
Summary of the 2013-2014 Academic Year

Part I

Overview of the Selection Committee’s Actions

There were two A.D. White Professor-at-Large Selection Committee meetings scheduled this year, which were held on September 17 and December 13, 2013.

The following is a list of Selection Committee Members for the 2013-2014 academic year.

[Each member of the Selection Committee, other than Ex Officio, agrees to a three-year term of office.]

Graeme Bailey, Professor of Computer Science
Debra Castillo, Department of Comparative Literature; E. Hinchcliff Professor of Spanish Literature
David Feldshuh, Professor, Performing and Media Arts
Maria Fernandez, Associate Professor, History of Art & Visual Studies
*Joseph Burns, Dean of Faculty; I.P. Church Professor of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering and Professor of Astronomy
*Kent Hubbell, Dean of Students; Nathan and Margaret Owings Professor of Architecture
*Barbara A. Knuth, Vice Provost, Dean of the Graduate School; Professor, Department of Natural Resources
Steven F. Pond, Associate Professor, Music
Annelise Riles, Professor, Law and Anthropology
*Robert A. Raguso, Program Chair; Professor, Neurobiology and Behavior
David Sherwyn, Professor, Hotel School
Richard Swedberg, Professor, Sociology
Thomas Robert Travers, Associate Professor, History

*Ex Officio members

The newest members of the Selection Committee Members this year are Annelise Riles (Law), David Sherwyn (Hotel School) and Richard Swedberg (Sociology). Rob Raguso agreed to another three-year term as Program Chair. Maria Fernandez and David Feldshuh also joined Rob for a second three-year term. Debra Castillo’s term appointment ends on June 30, 2014 as does that of Graeme Bailey, who completed a two-term appointment on the Committee. Professor Emeritus Cornelia Farnum (anatomy/zooology—Vet School) will join the Selection Committee for a three-year term effective July 1, 2014. (The limit for Committee Members is two terms.)

The activities of the Andrew D. White Professors-at-Large Selection Committee focus on the Call for Nominations annual competition, which involves the review and selection of nominations that are submitted under this effort. The current (2013-2014) roster of Professors-at-Large is at its maximum of 20, so it was agreed upon that the competition would not be held this year. The Call for Nominations will be initiated in Fall 2014. There will be three Professor-at-Large retirements in June 2014 to include Hélène Cixous (humanities), Denise Riley (humanities), and Hans Föllmer (physical sciences).

Ordinarily there are three Selection Committee meetings held during the academic year. At the first meeting (September) the Chair introduces and welcomes back new and current members, and the Committee reviews the Professor-at-Large and Selection Committee rosters for upcoming retirements, and approves the wording for the annual Call for Nominations. The second meeting of the year is held after the pre-proposal nominations are submitted in late November/early December. At this time, the Committee appraises, vets, and recommends which proposals should proceed to the next full proposal stage. The final meeting of the year takes place in February to review and determine the final selections from the full proposal nominations—once this is completed those nominations are forwarded to the President and Board of Trustees for their review and approval.

The annual schedule for the Call for Nominations submissions is as follows:

September: Review, approve and initiate the Call for Nominations
November: Deadline for Pre-proposal nominations
February: Deadline for Full-proposal nominations

Although no nominations were reviewed this year, there was one nominator (Jonathan Lunine/astronomy) who submitted a nomination for David Stevenson (astronomer/CalTech Planetary Sciences), last year (2012-2013). He was encouraged to resubmit his proposal this year but the Committee delayed a second review until 2014-2015.

The Committee did have the opportunity to discuss issues related to Program activities and provide advice regarding dynamics of visits and details related to this year’s visit schedule (as follows).

Professor-at-Large Formal Campus Visits 2013-2014

- ALBIE SACHS, Lawyer, judge, social activist
  Campus Visit: August 28-September 7, 2013
- HÉLÈNE CIXOUS, Feminist writer, poet, playwright, philosopher, literary critic and rhetorician
  Campus Visit: September 22-25, 2013
- JEFFREY MCNEELY, Conservationist
  Campus Visit: September 29-October 11, 2013
- NIMA ARKANI-HAMED, Physicist
  Campus Visit: September 30-October 5, 2013
- CHRISTOPHER HOGWOOD, Conductor, musicologist, keyboard player
  Campus Visit: October 25-November 1, 2013
- DENISE RILEY, Poet and Philosopher (canceled due to illness)
  Campus Visit: March 3-9, 2014

Summary of Selection Committee Meetings

Tuesday, September 17, 2013

The first meeting of the year acquaints new members with the Committee’s role and activities, allows for discussion about the annual Call for Nominations, and addresses any new or outstanding business. The Selection Committee Members receive handouts that include a roster of current PAL, a list of Selection Committee appointments by discipline, and PAL appointments by discipline. They review term limits of the current Committee Members and consider replacements of those individuals whose tenure ends in June. These names are forwarded on to the Nominations and Election Committee of the Faculty Senate for consideration.
Since it was determined that the annual Call for Nominations would not take place, there was a general review of the formal visit schedules as noted above. The early fall semester visit of Albie Sachs was detailed to illustrate some of the complexities encountered in program planning and also in the initial nominations process. The meeting also allowed for discussion about publicity and general concerns regarding faculty host behaviors and the intricacies of their expectations.

Friday, December 13, 2013

The second meeting of the year routinely focuses on the review of pre-proposal nominations and identifies those nominations that will be invited to proceed to the full proposal stage. This phase allows the Committee to consider the potential in each nomination. After this meeting, the Program Chair writes each nominator outlining the suggestions, questions or comments that have surfaced during the review of their proposal, which they are specifically asked to address in the full proposal nomination.

Because no proposals were submitted this year, the efforts of the Committee were directed to provide advisement during this year’s December meeting on issues often encountered in the development and execution of visit schedules.

PART II

Programs and Activities

The development of Professor-at-Large visit schedules hinge upon details outlined in full proposal nominations. The events and engagements included in campus visits feature a combination of classes, public lectures, performances, seminars, symposia, meetings and other engagements. The faculty hosts meet in advance with the A.D. White Professors-at-Large Program Chair and Administrator to set visit dates, prioritize the range of activities based upon the level of stakeholder interest, and determine the general timeline and pace of visit activities. Professors-at-Large and faculty hosts approve visit schedules in advance. The following is a list of public engagements presented in the 2013-2014 academic year. (The specific visit schedules for each visit have been included at the end of this document.) All these events were free and open to the public.

ALBIE SACHS, Lawyer, judge, social activist

Campus Visit: August 28-September 7, 2013 (first visit)

Public Lecture: Liberating the Mind and Liberating the Heart: South African Experience in Dealing with Terrorism and Torture
Behind what is regarded as the “Mandela Miracle” are the struggles inside the Liberation Movement not to use terrorism or torture: the result is one of the world’s greatest constitutions, and it works.

The Program has scheduled the formal campus visits for the next academic year as follows:

Professor-at-Large Formal Campus Visits for 2014-2015

- DAVID HILLIS, Evolutionary biologist
  September 21-27, 2014

- CHRISTOPHER HOGWOOD, Conductor, musicologist, keyboard player
  October 1-5, 2014

- ANDREW REVKIN, Media professional and science writer
  October 26-November 1, 2014

- LAURIE MARKER, Wildlife conservationist
  October 19-25, 2014

- MARGARET MCFALL NGAI, Microbiologist
  November 3-7, 2014

- WILLIAM FORSYTHE, Choreographer
  February 17-24, 2015

- DUNCAN WATTS, Network scientist
  September 8-15, 2014 and April 24-27, 2015 (Charter Weekend)

- LORD ROBERT SKIDELSKY, Political economist
  March 15-21, 2015

Conclusion

The first three (of five) scheduled formal campus visits in Fall '13 were made by new Professors-at-Large. The dynamics of Professors-at-Large initial visits generally involve a higher-level of activity in planning management in order to satisfactorily fulfill the expectations of faculty hosts and a wide range of stakeholders who supported the nomination. A Professor's first visit to campus creates a lot of anticipation and excitement, requiring more intensive scheduling demands to construct a well-balanced visit schedule that includes a range of proposed activities initially outlined in the nomination. Consequently, the fall semester was extremely busy. The spring semester 2014 visit by Denise Riley had to be canceled due to illness after all arrangements were in order.

The Program initiated three e-mail list serves to better publicize events, inform selection committee members and the campus and general community. We are building the constituency in addition to relying on the departments across campus to send out notices regarding PAL activities.

This year the Program initiated a more formal effort to recruit students to accompany the Professors-at-Large to and from their scheduled engagements. This effort allows for unique one-to-one opportunities for students to interact with Professors-at-Large. The visit schedules reflect the daily timeline of the engagements throughout campus that require the transport of a resident
Professor-at-Large to different locations across campus. This alleviates a substantial amount of physical effort required by the Program administrator during a weekly effort. Students have embraced the chance to briefly chaperone a PAL as it can create a notable and lasting memory of their time at Cornell.

Financial Summary

The Program exceeded the program budget this year, due in part to a $4924 charge for unanticipated utilities and maintenance charges, in addition there was a re-issue of a $5600 paycheck, and $560 fringe benefit expense cost associated with last year’s visit by PAL Shri Kulkarni (Prof. Kulkarni did not cash his paycheck issued during the last fiscal year.) There was also the unanticipated cost of a banquet in conjunction with the Albie Sachs that was organized by the Einaudi Center. The program was informed last week that the FY15 Program budget allocation will be $61,713., which reflects a 1% decrease ($617.). This is good news for the Program in light of the earlier news that the A.D. White Professors-at-Large budget allocation could see greater reductions. With this in mind, the financial health of the Program is presently very stable and the allocation is a vote of confidence for the Program’s future endeavors.

Andrew D. White Professors-at-Large
Selection Committee Meeting Minutes
September 17, 2013; 9:00-10:30 am
Statler Hotel; Four Seasons Room

Present: Graeme Bailey, David Feldshuh, Richard Swedberg, Kent Hubbel, Annelise Riles, David Sherwyn, Robert Raguso, Maria Fernandez, Robert Travers

Excused: Debra Castillo, Joseph Burns, Barbara Knuth

-Robert Raguso (Program Chair) opened the first meeting of the academic year ‘13 by welcoming new and continuing members of the A.D. White Professors-at-Large Selection Committee and the Members of the Selection Committee presented individual introductions in the round.

New Appointments:
Robert Raguso—Program Chair; Three-year extension (2013-2016)
Maria Fernandez—Three-year extension (2016)
David Feldshuh—Three-year extension (2016)
David Sherwyn—newly appointed for three years (2016)
Richard Swedberg—newly appointed for three years (2016)
Annelise Riles—newly appointed for three years (2016)

-Rob reviewed the specifics related to the role of the Selection Committee as outlined in the handout, mentioning that the oversight of the Program currently falls under the Office of the Dean of Faculty.

-The next item of business focused on recent first campus visit of Albie Sachs (2012-2018), who was elected as a Professor-at-Large in 2012. Prof. Sachs arrived on campus the first day of class for a 10-day visit, energetically delivering an average of two presentations per day over the course of this highly anticipated residency. The visit discussion was a good segue to review the nominations process, the submission of pre-proposals and full proposals and the review of established criteria that qualify the level of activity, interest, and involvement, which are factors that must be explicitly outlined in each nomination. As an example, he cited Sachs’s full proposal, which was absent of enough stakeholders across campus to illustrate a broad level of support. It was subsequently returned to the nominator, and, in a week’s time, was resubmitted back to the Committee with a more detailed listing of additional departments and faculty, and proposed activities. These were the necessary extra steps that eventually resulted in his selection as an AD White Professor-at-Large (PAL).

-Rob addressed specifics regarding efforts to improve efficiency in Program activities. A formal campus visit by a PAL may be categorized as short by calendar-year standards, and the timing of a visit may not allow everyone to attend events. To ensure broader access by members of the Cornell community, public lectures now are videotaped and posted on CornellCast. This past year, the Program website was updated and a new AD
White Professor-at-Large Facebook Page was created as a means increase awareness of Professor-at-Large programs among students, as well as faculty attuned to social media. Publicity is an area that always presents new challenges in reaching the attention of all populations across campus. The Program currently makes every effort to consistently distribute PAL information through listserv announcements, posters & their distribution, media advisories, newsletters, web postings and news articles—all requiring advanced acquisition of information on PAL program specifics. When this is provided in a timely fashion, these efforts are successful, however, when information is delayed or changed we can fall short of the intended publicity goals.

-Rob directed the attention of the Committee to some outstanding business issues to emphasize the importance of knowing in advance all we can about a candidate’s ability to work in the frameworks of their formal academic appointment. The 2013 appointment of recently elected PAL, Duncan Watts (’97)—sociologist and network scientist—presented a case in point as it was learned after the fact that Prof. Watts was unable to accept any salary payments (as outlined in his employment contract with Microsoft) and was also unable to sign any of the required Inventions and Property Rights forms. This was an unusual circumstance that required assistance from both University Human Resources and University Counsel to offer an adaptable solution allowing Prof. Watts to move forward with his faculty hosts to plan for 3 visits over six years. It was the mention specifically of his inclusion in the MOOC initiative (“Six Pretty Good Books”), which caused concern over IP issues, holding up clearance for his appointment.

-The Selection Committee members engaged in conversation regarding the need for a PAL to sign an IP form, especially considering the average amount of time they spend on campus during the course of a professorship. It was questioned whether a PAL could actually “invent” something during this short time period. Several Committee Members mentioned that the Program could run into this with other future candidates and, the acceptance of salary from third-party payment clauses are not uncommon in business. Counsel did provide a waiver of the IP requirement and outlined acceptable terms under which Prof. Watts’s activities should operate during his six-year professorship. This information was not immediately shared with Prof. Watts by his faculty hosts—essentially placing him in an awkward holding pattern until very recently. The Committee suggested the Program contact Patricia McClary to revisit the Inventions and Property form requirement and see whether it could be eliminated. The back-story to this is that the interactions between hosts, the Program, HR and University Counsel created a delicate situation that could have been avoided with better communication about a candidate’s contractual obligations. Penny emphasized that the A.D. White Professor-at-Large professorship is unique by comparison to other visiting professorships. The President and Board of Trustees elect each selected nominee as Professor-at-Large at their annual March meeting, which requires a formal legislative action. Professors-at-Large are considered to be full members of the Cornell faculty when they are in residence. The residencies are multi-faceted endeavors that employ a custom-developed format of consecutive day-to-day engagements, events, and interactions designed to address the needs not only of stakeholders but the entire university. Historically the Faculty Senate is the legislative body has acted to define programmatic specifics of the Professor-at-Large Program through the actions of Selection Committee.

-In concluding this part of the discussion, Rob mentioned issues related to the Anne Carson and play she has proposed to develop during her next campus visit. Rob cited concerns by both the faculty host and the Program. He mentioned the William Forsythe residency in ’11, which served to illustrate how the resources of a small academic program office are stretched when facing large-scale projects that rely on shared expenses and duties among Colleges and departments in fulfilling requirements of high-level creative endeavors. Prof. Carson’s request to embark on a production, while an exciting prospect, was discouraged not only due to the lack of resources, but also concerns over the project proposal and IP issues. Anne Carson was well aware of the Forsythe activities, and it was felt she wanted the same sort of opportunity, which is both logistically and financially inviable.

-Transitioning to new business, Rob outlined the latest bumper crop of 6 new AD White Professors-at-Large, which brings the total of the roster to 20 this year. He announced that this meets the maximum number allowed on the roster.

The 2013 New Professors-at-Large:

- David Hillis (evolutionary biologist)—Life Science
- Andrew Revkin (journalist)—Social Science/Life Science
- Laurie Marker (animal conservationist)—Life Science
- Nima Arkani-Hamed (physicist)—Physical Science
- Lakhdar Brahimi (diplomat)—Social Science
- Duncan Watts (sociologist/network scientist)—Social Science

-In explaining the acquisition of new PAL faculty, Rob announced that visits by Professors-at-Large have now been scheduled through 2014-2015. Because the visits are confirmed for the next two years, any Professors-at-Large that would be elected this year would not be able to visit until 2015-2016, which will undoubtedly be cause for great disappointment by many nominators (unlikely to be happy about waiting that long).

-Because the professorial roster is at its limit, Rob suggested that the Committee suspend holding a Call for Nominations 2014. The Committee wondered whether this action had a precedent and what could be gathered from potential nominators this year to maintain the momentum of the annual competition. It was suggested that a “looking-to-the-future” announcement be presented in place of this year’s Call for Nomination, which explains the next initiative and the search to be focused specifically on the humanities and physical sciences. One-page submissions that outline potential nominations will be solicited, allowing for an interaction (a year in advance) between Selection Committee Members and future nominators. With this in mind, it was agreed to take a one-year break from the formal Call for Nominations initiative.

-During the remainder of the meeting the Selection Committee revisited the role of the faculty hosts, from the nominations process through the handling of PAL residencies. Those hosts who are fully engaged, and hit the ground running during a residency reveal that success lies in their initial investment of time to develop a practical network of cooperation with diverse departments across campus that are committed to engaging a Professor-at-Large during their six-year term. The requirement of faculty hosting now requires a team approach—to allow for back up and/or shared duties. This takes the nomination outside of a “department” and places emphasis on a “group.” Rob presented the example of the Rebecca Solnit, who was unfortunately orphaned by a number of faculty hosts, which has deflated all momentum for her engagement in the professorship. In another example, an entire team of faculty departed Cornell after successfully nominating AD White Professor-at-Large, Hans Föllmer. Although an alternate host was located that very successfully hosted one formal campus visit, the impetus and potential of the professorship was diminished as a result of abandonment by the initial hosts. Issues regarding replacement of faculty hosts have fallen squarely on the shoulders of the Program Office. This puts the Program in the role of intermediary trying to smooth out any bumps in the effort to construct a new PAL support system.

-In closing it was decided that the Committee meet one more time before the end of the calendar year. Although this year could be considered off-cycle in relation to the nomination’s initiative, the Members are interested in spending some time in an advisement capacity to further examine some of the most critical aspects of programmatic program operations.

Four Seasons Room, Statler Hotel

Present: Barbara Knuth, Maria Fernandez, Debra Castillo, Richard Swedberg, Robert Raguso
Excused: Graeme Bailey, Joseph Burns, Kent Hubbell, Thomas Robert Travers, David Sherwyn, Annelise Riles, Steven Pond

-Rob opened the breakfast meeting with greetings and thanks to those Committee Members who were able to attend.

-He began the meeting with a review of the Program's accomplishments over Fall Semester 2013 by highlighting the five formal campus visits of Professors Sachs, Cixous, Arkani-Hamed, McNeely and Hogwood. The visit of Denise Riley scheduled for March 2014 will be the final visit of this academic year. During that time, Rob announced that he will be on sabbatical and that both he and Penny have arranged for weekly communication regarding Program matters.

-The Committee examined next the outstanding business regarding the term limits of the Selection Committee Members, with a notice that the terms of Graeme Bailey (physical science) and Debra Castillo (humanities) expire on June 30, 2014. Rob asked the Members to suggest names as possible replacements. They reviewed the listing of the current Committee Members by their respective disciplines, noting that faculty replacements in arts and humanities are currently underrepresented. Typically Committee assignments are suggested to provide even representation across all disciplines.

-A following brief discussion with Maria Fernandez with comments about the visit of Nima Arkani-Hamed, ushered in the next order of business regarding the role of faculty hosts. Rob used this opportunity to initiate a discussion by citing specific examples of circumstances and dynamics that have arisen with faculty hosts after a nominee has been selected as a Professor-at-Large. Despite the fact that Professor Arkani-Hamed's public lectures were videotaped and posted on CornellCast, and recorded on DVD, Maria's comments about the need to expand and improve publicity for upcoming ADW visits spoke to a number of underlying issues that affect the overall goals of visit efforts.

-Professor Nima Arkani-Hamed's primary faculty host announced his sabbatical to Rob and Penny at the initial planning meeting for Nima’s visit that was held in June. This placed the responsibility of the visit on the shoulders of the secondary host (Csaba Csaki) who was unable to attend the meeting (out of town till the end of August), and by design, an administrative assistant in the Physics department became a third wheel in the effort to arrange and communicate details related to all engagements. Rob explained that these dynamics reflect the host who utilizes a “we’ll-take-care-of-it approach.” In this instance, the nominator pushed hard to lobby for the nominee to be chosen, but once selected, the details fell to his proxies that were not well informed about the Program policies and procedures. Subsequently, Nina's campus visit activities remained focused primarily in the realm of the high-energy physics group.

In the instance of the Fall Semester 2014 visit of evolutionary biologist, David Hillis, Rob mentioned he had learned that the primary faculty host just recently accepted a one-year appointment at the National Science Foundation. Like the previous example, the responsibilities have been passed on to a "secondary" host who is now expected to assume the role full on. This can catch alternate hosts off-guard and leave them feeling disconcerted at the prospect of coordinating the visit alone. Often, in this instance, the "third-wheel" dynamic, emerges, which places (an assigned) administrative staff member from another department squarely in the middle of program planning because of their knowledge of host departments and its events scheduling system. Usually, this works out, but in some instances this can be an obstacle in fulfilling the objectives of the professorship through the creation of a hierarchy that hampers overall communication.

Rob presented examples of several instances when celebrity Professors-at-Large have been orphaned by their hosts, because the hosts have left Cornell. These are not only an embarrassment to Program efforts, and become very tricky triage to locate and reassign replacement faculty, but also can speak against the entire nominations process. Oftentimes, a nominee's prestige can initially outshine that of other candidates. However, it has become essential to insist that despite the name recognition of a candidate, all nominations must detail the ability of all potential faculty hosts to fulfill their responsibilities. Rob also added that "six-years sounds fine in the beginning," however, it's over the long term that the success of a professorship is determined. David Feldshuh felt that a "more-said-than-done" syndrome could be alleviated by better utilizing the Program's position of advantage from the beginning of the nomination process. He suggested that a nominator's "position of need" be the means to determine and ensure their future commitment to a nomination, and that the time to iron out any concerns about their availability or operational intentions be ascertained at that time. If this can't be solicited from a host in the beginning, it does not speak positively about the viability of a nominee's selection, regardless of the star-quality of a candidate.

In the continuing discussion, Rob cited the MOOC initiative as a new element in the University landscape that has presented the Program with a several quandaries—as specifically related to Duncan Watts and faculty hosts Michael Macy and Steven Strogatz. The previous relationship of Duncan Watts and his hosts presented a number of unusual dynamics. The faculty hosts have proceeded to make plans outside of the Program and it has been very difficult to isolate times to meet with them. He senses the hosts "want everything just taken care of"—as necessary—and the communication related to the importance of the proposed MOOC course "Six Pretty Good Books" that plans to feature Prof. Watts's book Everything is Obvious, overshadows any need for them to communicate about the professorship. Because Prof. Watt's employment contract does not allow him to receive a salary and as an alumnus, he has an unusual familiarity of the Cornell environment, this leaves wide open the potential for out-of-order planning and arbitrary decision-making by hosts because of their sense of entitlement reaped in part through their involvement in the MOOC.

In closing the discussion on this segment, Rob reiterated that the resources of the Program do not allow for us to do more than we are already involved in doing. To make certain that all Professors-at-Large visit campus at least two times during their professorship, the Program formal visit schedules are at maximum through 2014-2015 (9) and we are already filling spots for 2015-2016. Rob expressed concern that missteps by some faculty hosts could spoil the future commentary related to future nominations of luminaries if some measure to deflect a point of diminishing returns is not initiated. [The expectation that well known nominees will conduct great programs hinges greatly on the successful collaboration with hosts.]

During this portion of the discussion the Committee reviewed a draft of a letter to Patricia McClary regarding the requirement for all Professors-at-Large to sign the Inventions and Related Property Rights form. The Committee suggested a number of changes to the draft that requests to waive this requirement. Barbara Knuth suggested that the corrected draft of the letter be sent to Robert Buhrman (Sr. Vice Provost for Research) and copied to Patricia McClary versus being sent directly to Patricia.

Rob reviewed an email by Prof. Jonathan Lunine regarding last year's David Stevenson nomination. It was tabled for review until this year. Because of the decision to take a hiatus from the competition, it could not be acted upon. Committee urged Prof. Lunine to resubmit the proposal next year (Call for Nominations 2015).

-The final part of the meeting focused briefly on the formal campus visits for 2014-2015 and some of the upcoming activities that have been planned. The visit of Margaret McFall Ngai will include a photo exhibition in Mann Library and a planned associated seminar may be approved as a one-credit course. Anne Carson was not able to visit this year and her initial plans had to be discouraged. She had been interested for a new work to be created within various settings throughout campus and Ithaca. Unfortunately, the Program had to discourage this complex effort due to funding and staffing concerns however Prof. Carson does have plans to return in the Spring Semester 2015. Penny elaborated on communications for Simon Baron-Cohen's first-time visit (Spring 2015), which has, like several previously mentioned examples, met with a number of obstacles related to availability of faculty hosts.

-The meeting was adjourned and the next meeting of the A.D. White Professor-at-Large Selection Committee will be scheduled to take place in September 2014.

Course Descriptions:

LAW 6601 Land Use
-L. Underkoffer

This course will provide a broad introduction to the theory, doctrine, and history of land use regulation. Topics will include the meaning of ownership; theories behind land use controls; the private nuisance action; zoning, including the permissible content of zoning laws, contract and conditional zoning; vested rights, development agreements, and "ballot box" zoning; and constitutional limitations on government action in land-use controls, including takings law, the First Amendment, and due process challenges. We will also consider current hot topics in land-use law, such as brownfields legislation, natural gas fracking, sprawl, conservative easements, historic preservation laws, and endangered species legislation.

LAW 6561 International Human Rights Law and Institutions
-M. Ndulo.

International Human Rights Law and Institutions seek to promote and secure for the individual protection of an array of agreed rights in his/her national society. The individual will turn to international law and institutions in order to enhance support for and to vindicate his/her rights under national law. The objective of the course is to introduce the student to the theory, norms, and institutions central to the international human rights legal regime. The course will explore the emergence and the enforcement of international human rights norms, the international machinery for the protection of human rights in the world community including the United Nations Human Rights Committee, the European Court of Human Rights, the African Court of Human Rights, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, and the International Criminal Court. Relevant decisions of these courts and of municipal courts will be studied as well as basic documents. It will also examine domestic mechanisms for the enforcement of international human rights against foreign violators through for example, the Alien Tort Claims Act and the Torture Victim Protection Act. It will further examine the liability of corporations for human rights violations.

Lecture Presentation: Philosophy of Fundamental Physics Lecture—Part I
Location: Schwartz Auditorium, Rockefeller Hall
(To be videotaped)

This is a singular time in the development of fundamental physics. The triumphs of the 20th century culminated in the understanding that the principles of quantum mechanics and space-time make the structure of the laws of nature inevitable. The central challenge of the 21st century is that at the deepest level, these principles are mutually contradictory and seem to make the existence of our universe impossible. Unlike ever before, new theoretical ideas are shockingly constrained by physical and mathematical consistency with what we already know. This gives an unambiguous metric for theoretical progress, since finding even candidate solutions to the open problems, that are not obviously wrong, is extremely difficult. In these lectures I will describe the different avenues we are pursuing in attacking the central problems of fundamental physics today, guided by the rough-and-ready philosophy of “radical conservatism”. I will illustrate how this philosophy has time and again led to those very rare ideas which pass the myriad of checks to even have a chance of being right, in examples ranging from the birth of relativity and quantum mechanics to the Higgs boson and string theory, and speculate on where this philosophy might lead us in this century.

Program Description:

Cornell Now: Student Talent Takes the Stage
After a day of enlightening discussions and thought-provoking panels, thought leadership at Cornell shows its expressive side. Our incredibly gifted students take the stage, offering you an immersion in performance, art, and design you won’t soon forget. During the reception, be sure to make your way to each of the interactive art, design, and engineering exhibitions stationed around Barton Hall—where students and their faculty mentors show you some of their work and let you witness their creation process in action. During dinner, you’ll be treated to a diversity of live performances by students. You’ll also hear from university leadership and special guests with some reflections on the roles thought leaders have played in shaping Cornell’s path forward.

4:30 pm
Lecture Presentation: On the Lapidary Style
'The lapidary style' suggests a manner of working a material – carving lettering into rock, cutting a gem into fine facets. Poised between the properties of the stone and of the jewel, this term echoes the tensions of the poem itself in the face of its own resources. This talk will range over the curious nature of 'style', the virtues of concision and incisiveness, the 'materiality' of language, and epigraphy in a digital age. The 'lapidary' shows us the profound implication of a 'style' with semantic meaning.
Introduction: Presented by faculty host Brett de Bary

4:00-6:00 pm
Presentation for Graduate Seminar/Reading from the book On Poetic Language (Jan Mukařovský)
Location: A.D. White House, Room 201
Professor Riley will lead a discussion of Jan Mukařovský and the question of poetic meaning. The conversation will focus on both poetics and translation theory. Mukařovský (1891-1975) was a Czech literary theorist, deeply involved in the Prague Linguistic Circle, and in developing the ideas of formalism. This he did together with Roman Jakobson. His work on poetry argues that the 'non-semantic' features of poetry are, in fact, critical components of poetic meaning.
