The Centre for Health Law, Ethics and Technology (CHLET) at Jindal Global Law School in Haryana, India, is looking for interns to work with us for 1-3 months, starting August 2019 onwards.

CHLET undertakes cutting-edge legal empirical research on contemporary questions of sexuality, gender, public policy and health law. CHLET collaborates and engages with people's movements on issues of gender and sexuality. CHLET adopts a multidisciplinary approach and focuses particularly on the rights of sexual minorities; gender minorities and gender diverse people; constitutional right to health and reproductive rights.

Eligibility:

- Degree in law or equivalent qualification
- Excellent research and writing skills
- Commitment to social justice issues
As an intern at CHLET, I had the opportunity to prepare, execute, and report on field interviews. Professors Dipika Jain and Kimberly Rhoten spearheaded a cooperative effort with the international human rights clinic at Fordham Law School in the US. Together we interviewed Nepali activists in Kathmandu. The purpose of the preliminary investigation was to gather information about sexual assault against and within the Nepali LGBTQ community. My brief time at CHLET was transformative. I felt inspired and motivated by the passion of the faculty. I am so grateful for my fortune and experience with the clinical work.

- Kara, University of Chicago Law School, Summer 2014 Intern

Working with CHLET provided me with diverse experiences ranging from field trips and conferences, to learning the essentials of research work. The center primarily engages in micro-level research projects in order to understand the efficiency and efficacy of various laws and policies related to gender and health. I worked on a couple of projects at different stages of maturity. This has made me more confident in my ability to delve in research work on my own. Working with the center is a great way to gain perspective in research work on gender, constitutional law etc. Personally, it has been one of my most engaging internships.

- Deepanshi Sharma, Jindal Global Law School, Summer 2018 Intern

I would describe my internship experience with CHLET as a very informative glimpse into the life of an academic. I realise the tremendous amount of reading, writing and self-discipline that must be invested in the same. The internship was especially fruitful because of the efforts made to make it beneficial for us; during the weekly reading groups, we not only got the platform to discuss relevant and fascinating pieces, but also interact with and learn from brilliant scholars about their field of work. The work environment was also extremely understanding and I am very grateful to have gotten the opportunity to work for CHLET.

- Katyayani Sinha, Jindal Global Law School, Summer/Winter 2018 Intern

The most unique takeaway from my month long engagement with CHLET, was the nuanced insight it provided me regarding the relatively less explored area of legal academia. Assisting with organizational work in conducting the certificate course on Rights of Transgender, Intersex and Gender Diverse People was particularly instrumental and reflected the importance of capacity building to bridge the gap between academia and social reality. I was also able to explore my interest in area of health and sexuality and overall the internship was a deeply enriching experience.
