Additionally, the survey results helped the GEIA team develop informational graphics to better understand the feedback from the respondents. These graphics were designed to highlight the key findings and insights gained from the survey, making it easier for the audience to grasp the data. The team thanks the researchers for their amazing efforts!

The survey revealed that a majority of respondents who identified as women valued their time with GEIA as enriching, fun, and memorable. They appreciated the opportunities for networking and professional development within the Elliott School and in the wider international affairs community. The GEIA Bulletin would like to feature events with the GEIA community, and we are grateful to all those who celebrated the anniversaries of women's suffrage in the International Women’s Day Conference. It was a special day that underscored the importance of women’s inclusion in matters of war prevention and peacemaking.

Dr. Jessica Turner shared this overview and analysis of the GEIA survey:

"Recognizing Women Peacebuilders: Critical Actors in Effective Peacemaking"

The discussion will look at how countries are expanding on the Women, Peace and Security agenda, which includes a focus on key thematic priorities of bodily autonomy, peace, environmental protection, human security sub-fields: armed conflict, post-conflict, terrorism, military organizations, immigration, funding, and oversight mechanisms. If scholars, policymakers and citizens care about these issues, then they need to think about both peace and security and women’s empowerment.

The new book, "Women Transform Peace," by Dr. Graham and

"Understanding Women Peacebuilders: Their Experiences and Experiences in Various Roles," by Dr. Peacemaking"

Dr. Michael E. Brown and

"Women and the Protection of Civilians: Women Peacebuilding and Peacekeeping" by Dr. Graham examines the gender dimensions of a wide array of national and international security discourse, "the resolution states.

Over 70% of respondents who identified as women reported that their time with GEIA was enriching, fun, and memorable. They appreciated the opportunities for networking and professional development within the Elliott School and in the wider international affairs community. The GEIA Bulletin would like to feature events with the GEIA community, and we are grateful to all those who celebrated the anniversaries of women's suffrage in the International Women’s Day Conference. It was a special day that underscored the importance of women’s inclusion in matters of war prevention and peacemaking.

Dr. Jessica Turner shared this overview and analysis of the GEIA survey:

"Recognizing Women Peacebuilders: Critical Actors in Effective Peacemaking"

The discussion will look at how countries are expanding on the Women, Peace and Security agenda, which includes a focus on key thematic priorities of bodily autonomy, peace, environmental protection, human security sub-fields: armed conflict, post-conflict, terrorism, military organizations, immigration, funding, and oversight mechanisms. If scholars, policymakers and citizens care about these issues, then they need to think about both peace and security and women’s empowerment.