

“Recent advances in quartz-enhanced gas-phase photoacoustic spectroscopy,” A.A. Kosterev, F.K. Tittel. Quartz crystal tuning forks were used as resonant microphones for photoacoustic gas sensing. This results in a novel technique for performing gas analysis of extremely small samples and sensor immunity to external acoustic noise.