This course explores human evolution from the time of our divergence from the other African apes through the appearance of anatomically modern humans. It is focused on the human fossil record, but includes other aspects of human evolution such as archaeological material and evidence from living human populations.