For a complete list of University and community opportunities to celebrate Black History Month, please visit the University Division on Equity and Inclusion website.

The staff and faculty of the Family and Human Services program commit to improving how we include, learn from, and celebrate the scientific and human service contributions of diverse communities and cultures. Two efforts that we are working on this month include (1) creating a more comprehensive list of electives that focus on diverse communities and (2) improving the quality and frequency of students’ contact with faculty and GE instructors in FHS classes. Thank you for continuing to provide your Dean's Student Advisory Board (see below), me, supervisors, and your instructors with positive and constructive feedback about your educational experiences in the FHS major and for working with us to identify solutions that work for all.

Did you know that you have a Dean’s Student Advisory Board representative? Shannon Mason, FHS senior, is your student program representative to the DSAB. Shannon shares your feedback and experiences with the Dean and advises the Dean on decisions affecting undergraduate in the College of Education.

Our FHS faculty, GEs, and staff continue to see the real struggles that many of you are experiencing as you work so hard to pursue your academic goals. Please reach out. Knowing when you need support and asking for it are critical skills that all human service providers must develop. Asking for support is not weakness. Visit and bookmark these student resource websites, which are updated weekly. Student Food Pantry & One Stop Student Resources