Graduate students admitted to the UO Ph.D. program with an M.A. in French, Spanish, Italian, or Romance Languages from the University of Oregon may count toward their Ph.D. course requirements a maximum of two graduate courses completed during their M.A. programs, provided that these courses have not already been counted toward fulfillment of the M.A. requirements. Up to 12 of the 84 required credits for the Ph.D. may be taken outside of the department, with the authorization of the advisor, and provided that they bear directly on the student’s program of study. A doctoral student can apply one graded Reading and Conference course towards the degree. With permission and a compelling reason, a doctoral student who has not already used one Reading and Conference course to complete degree requirements for the M.A. may use two graded Reading and Conference courses to meet requirements at the Ph.D. level.
