The Springfield Public Library is the hub and heart of the Springfield community. It is treasured by all of us for its educational, cultural, historical, and economic importance. The Library has become more vital than ever before. It is a place that goes beyond books; it is a destination and a point of access to the world through technology and media, it provides a place for job searches and research, as well as for books, movies, digital resources and more.

http://www.springfield-or.gov/city/library/
The Springfield Public Library will be the latest in remaking the civic heart of Springfield Oregon. This is based on the real project currently in the planning phase for the city. The building should reflect the current and future visions of the people of Springfield. It should be both more visible and more accessible. It should be built using forms and materials that reflect its place and promise to endure for future generations. We will work with the library staff and others in Springfield to develop visions for their future home. The library will continue to be part of the downtown heart of Springfield, but in a better location.

In addition to the comprehensive design of a building/s, issues to be addressed in the studio are: lighting, materials of construction, and the image of an important civic building.