Directed Reading Program

Applications due December 11, 2020

To find more information and to apply visit blogs.uoregon.edu/uomathdrp

Interested in learning more math outside of the classroom?

Our graduate mentors are ready to work with you!

The Directed Reading Program (DRP) is an organization that pairs undergraduate and graduate students together to undertake independent study projects remotely during winter term.

Some reasons to participate:

- You’ve always been curious to learn about some particular topic in math.
- You will gain valuable independent study skills.
- You will get an opportunity to meet a graduate student and to learn more about what it’s like to do math outside of a classroom setting.
- After completing the program, you will be given a $50 credit for a math textbook!

Visit blogs.uoregon.edu/uomathdrp for more information about our reading program