Transitions

Pictured above are the NIS 6-12 Ambassadors. Their job is to help ease the new students' transition into NIS. Along the way, acquaintances are made, friendships are formed, and the stress of transitioning to a new school is lessened. Every student pictured above remembers what it was like to be a new student at NIS and jumped at the chance to help others.

In the Primary School, students are paired with a buddy in their classroom who fulfills the same role. In addition to their peer helpers, students have their teachers, principals, and counselors to help them adjust to their new school lives. As you know, it's not just the student who is transitioning into a new life, it is the family as well. If you are struggling with your transition and how to help your child, please reach out to the counselors in your child's division for help.

We look forward to working with you and your children this year and hope to see you at the transition workshop on September 13.
