NETWORKING

PURPOSE

- The purpose of networking is to connect and gather information.
- You are simply inquiring if your reader is willing to share insights, suggestions, and experiences. This is not a transaction where you are asking your contact to provide employment. Unburdened by the expectation to "get you a job or internship," the contact is far more likely to respond and provide helpful information.

RESOURCES

- If you are using the Dartmouth Career Network to make a connection, each person listed there has volunteered to offer advice and provided their contact information specifically for this purpose. You are not imposing when you reach out.
- LinkedIn is a valuable source for networking. As the world's largest social network, including over 54,000 Dartmouth students and alumni. LinkedIn enables you to see how others present their skills and experience. In LinkedIn, you can create your own profile, similar to an "online resume," and make connections throughout the world. Check out our Quick Tips for LinkedIn to learn more about creating and optimizing your profile.

SAMPLE NETWORKING INQUIRY

Subject Line: Student Interested in your Experience
Dear Mr. Ruben,

I am currently a <<student year>> at Dartmouth College where I study <<insert subject>>. I came across your name through the <<insert source>>. I would appreciate the opportunity to talk with you and learn more about your experience in <<insert area>> as your schedule allows.

I look forward to hearing back from you and the opportunity to connect in the near future. I am available by email <<insert address>> and/or cell <<insert phone>>. Thank you in advance,

All the best,
Anita Job

REACHING OUT

- The key in reaching out is to phrase your email in a way that will prompt your reader to say "yes."
- Keep your inquiry brief and considerate. Do not set a "time limit" on when you expect a response.
- Explain who you are and why you are writing (remember the "why" is information).
- Do not provide a resume unless/until you are asked to do so.

AFTER YOUR INITIAL OUTREACH

Be patient: recognize that you may not hear back from a contact for several days. Try reaching out again after 7-10 days. Being (politely) persistent is key. Give it 2-3 attempts before moving on. Once you manage to connect, see if you can set up a regular time to check in with each other, perhaps every month or every quarter, depending on the contact's preference. This way you develop and maintain a strong connection. This is an investment in your future and you're flexing an important muscle: your networking abilities!

Practice gratitude and think about ways to make the networking relationship feel more reciprocal. Saying "thanks" is a must - always send a thank you email or send a hand-written note within 48 hours to express your appreciation for the conversation. If appropriate, you could also offer help in return. Perhaps the person you talked with mentioned struggling with Excel. If you have strong skills in Excel, you might mention that and ask how you could be helpful.

6 TIPS FOR THE PERFECT ELEVATOR PITCH

BRIEF
Keep it to 30 - 60 seconds. No need to recap your entire life or every single internship you’ve had.

INTRIGUING
Your pitch is your teaser trailer. Make the person you’re talking to want to learn more about you. What are 2-3 skills you bring to the table that you’re most proud of? When others compliment you, what do they say? What motivates you?

SIMPLE
Be mindful of who you’re talking to. Avoid using industry-specific jargon (including acronyms). Keep it simple and concise.

FLEXIBLE
Be prepared to adjust your pitch for different circumstances, opportunities or industries. Starting your pitch by leading with your knack for coding might be more effective when talking to a tech recruiter than in a conversation about public health internships. Also, be prepared to condense or expand on your ideas.

EXPRESSIVE
Present yourself as a curious problem solver and a positive influence to any organization. You have a lot to offer to the world. Trust that and speak with confidence. Engage the person you’re talking to, believe in yourself, and demonstrate your confidence and positivity with your voice!

CURIOUS
Connect through curiosity: "I saw that you earned a degree in Computer Science, which is also my major - how well would you say your degree prepared you for the day-to-day challenges at your organization?"
