History is the history of everybody. Rome was a slave society, and the bottom rank in the Roman census classes was made up of those with no property worth assessing. In Roman comedy, if you listen, you can hear those people speak. This year's Deppe Lecture reminds us that Classics opens the door to everybody's history.